Yeah, baby! We got LCRA. Thanks to everyone for all of your hard work on this deal.

Harry,

I'm not sure how familiar you are with this deal. In its entirety, it is a little over 1,500 units. We are starting off with a 40 unit pilot for proof of concept. The pilot will not involve any other GPS providers. I'd like to have the SAM be involved from the start of this pilot if that is OK with you. If you could let me know what you're thinking about who that will be. We can schedule a meeting to discuss the details.

To: "Jeremy Thacker" <jeremy.thacker@gpsinsight.com>

Jeremy-

We received approval to move forward with the pilot program. We still have an installation quote and asset list request in flux, but we should be able to move forward with the pilot agreement and the contract documents for the non-pilot engagement. We will owe you a list of the actual assets (40) that we will want to include and Miguel is working on this list (the asset list with hardware will be helpful for this as well). I would like to work on both the pilot and non-pilot contract documents in tandem so we have a contract vehicle ready (baring any changes we find from the pilot assessment and minor updates) once the pilot phase is over. We were not sure if the solution was definitely going to be SaaS so we included our Services Contract in our RFP, but your SaaS agreement should be the primary document that LCRA redlines versus working off the LCRA document. I can incorporate your notes that you provided on the Services Contract for our Legal review. We will want to include our SOW, pricing table and change order form as exhibits and this is more for the final contract. I will have to review the version of the pilot agreement that you send to determine what we need as part of the agreement. You sent me a sample, but I would prefer to review the actual document. LCRA Legal will want to provide their review for both documents. Will you send me the contract documents, in Word format?

I know the next question from my team will be, how soon can we get started with the pilot once we sign the pilot agreement? Any ideas how the schedule typically proceeds from there (kickoff meeting then....).

The team is looking forward to working with GPS Insight.

Best Regards,
Sherry

I need to let you know two things about what was stated today regarding you. I'm sorry for the likely unwanted intrusion.

1: Jeremy stated to Jason that I sent you the recorded phone call which I did not. I'm not sure why he would lie about this and it is strange.

2. He told Jason you shared my text regarding it with him. Whether you did or not, I want you to know that was divulged by Jeremy.

FYI the texts were sent before I learned Friday how badly he hurt his employment likelihood with Jason Thursday afternoon. I did not know anything about it when I sent that to you mostly for your information regarding our conversation.

Once Jason and Tyler heard it it was the final straw they decided, and I agreed.

I would appreciate your keeping this text between us, specifically Jason who rightfully suggested I not text you regarding this manner.

I hope you are ok. Life will go on.

Rob

Mar 8, 2017, 11:56:27 PM Eastern Time: Me: You know better. I'm sorry you're hurt and you think I've wronged you. I have no intentions of hurting you even though I'm in a position to do so. I don't want to win while someone else loses. Even if I've got every right to hurt them. I'm just sad for everyone.

Mar 8, 2017, 11:57:07 PM Eastern Time: Rob Donat: Please check on Kristin-- only reason I called you. She's in bad shape.

Mar 8, 2017, 11:57:24 PM Eastern Time: Rob Donat: I'm very worried.

Mar 8, 2017, 11:58:05 PM Eastern Time: Rob Donat: Not sure who you thought you were texting but either way please check on her.

Mar 8, 2017, 11:58:37 PM Eastern Time: Rob Donat: I'm in FL and don't want to call Jesse or the police so I called you and Lance

Mar 8, 2017, 11:58:48 PM Eastern Time: Me: I will

Mar 8, 2017, 11:59:06 PM Eastern Time: Me: She is OK.

Mar 8, 2017, 11:59:21 PM Eastern Time: Rob Donat: If you say so.

Mar 8, 2017, 11:59:45 PM Eastern Time: Me: She's just a mess and ashamed.

Mar 8, 2017, 11:59:51 PM Eastern Time: Rob Donat: Only person you have the ability to hurt is her and her career/life/

Mar 9, 2017, 12:01:15 AM Eastern Time: Me: I'm not being short or condescending. I'd never harm her. Ever. I'd take a bullet for her and already have. I've never said a discouraging word to her. I mean it.

Mar 9, 2017, 12:03:14 AM Eastern Time: Rob Donat: Clearly you've helped her situation in the past 3 months. I'm done -- no interest in discussing this with you personally. I just needed to know she was ok. Thank you and I appreciate it.

Mar 9, 2017, 12:06:41 AM Eastern Time: Me: Why don't you ask her and then listen and let her talk? She wants you be honest with you but doesn't think she can. If you love her, listen to her completely. I'm sorry you feel the way you do.

Mar 9, 2017, 12:13:41 AM Eastern Time: Rob Donat: What the hell are you talking about? She was wasted or incoherent and sobbing and stopped talking/breathing. I'm not calling to chat. I'm calling to help her regain her credibility to Jason Tyler and Elliot. Give her some X I'm sure it will help.

Mar 9, 2017, 12:14:51 AM Eastern Time: Rob Donat: That was facetious. To be clear, don't. Stop ruining her life and career and family.

Mar 9, 2017, 12:19:45 AM Eastern Time: Rob Donat: "You know better. I'm sorry you're hurt and you think I've wronged you. I have no intentions of hurting you even though I'm in a position to do so. I don't want to win while someone else loses. Even if I've got every right to hurt them. I'm just sad for everyone."

Mar 9, 2017, 12:37:00 AM Eastern Time: Rob Donat: Jeremy, what are you even talking about? I know better what? Why don't you just come out and say what you're not saying? No one understands but you, Jeremy. And no one cares. There are 20 non negotiable iron-clad reasons we finally after 3 years pulled your plug before it got worse and worse and worse. And we are looking for/finding/documenting more. Just go out and work your magic for some other company and succeed like you clearly can. I like reasonably good, kind, (non-creepy-girlfriend-phone-hacking) positive people who aren't total Seawards so we needed to part ways. Jason and Tyler more than me. They agreed before I brought them the recording you were so considerate to make. I didn't even know how on the bubble you were after the meeting Thursday. I love the money you bring in. But not the constant bitching about you I hear and morale issues. Money isn't worth it.

Sorry. It's done. Move on.

Good luck with the suit. I suggest you keep your money as I will defend it trivially, using LCRA residuals. Nothing we have let you go over is a protected category. Stop being a baby and just go out and get a job. I'm sure this wasn't your first. I got fired once and it was transformative. I hope it is for you. Don't reply I'm done. Sticking you on block since lawyers insist everything go through them. Since you aren't iOS you won't know I'm not receiving your texts. Good night and thank you for checking on KL. She's a different person in 2017 and I'm worried, that's all. Worried about others this and last year as well.

Mar 9, 2017, 12:54:04 AM Eastern Time: Rob Donat: Screw it I unblocked you. I hate lawyers. I had to fix typos in their agreement anyway. Feel free to respond as long as you realize I'm not interested in getting into an escalating flame war. I'm at the happiest place on earth. And by the way it's a sneaking suspicion not a sneaky suspicion. And Toodles? Really...

Robert Dennis - Resignation

Robert Donat <rdonat@gpsinsight.com>
To: Robert Dennis <robert.v.dennis@gmail.com>

Fri, Aug 4, 2017 at 6:31 PM

Robert,

You may have misunderstood my message.

I wanted you to know that by having obvious lunches with Kristin and Jeremy immediately subsequent to large meetings and by having employees bring it to our attention as well as hear Kristin's voice on the phone while you were talking to her in the office, you weren't doing yourself any favors with your fellow employees/managers. It made it hard for them to trust you. I wanted you to continue to benefit by and for GPSI. I never said it was actually better to look than be innocent. Perhaps I said it may be in your case since you looked to be anxious to feed them information and whether you were or not, the perception meant in their minds that you were.

I am fairly certain you may have literally no idea what actually caused their downfall and it's not really my place to let you know. If it's not 100% clear and unambiguous to you, then you don't know what has been going on.

Look Kristin and Jeremy in the eye and ask them for the complete truth about what actually happened both before and after Jeremy was fired by Jason for cause and gauge carefully whether you think they're giving it to you. I'm pretty sure they aren't. Maybe I'm wrong. I don't think so though. Jason, Tyler, Elliot, Kristin, Jeremy, and our lawyers (and I...) have the full facts. I think you're working off of Cliff's Notes written by Mr. Thacker.

I've worked incredibly hard the past 40 years of my life getting to where I'm at. I have no issue whatsoever buying toys at this point in my life (just like Jeremy had no issue buying them ILLEGALLY with the company credit card). It's my business "gambling winnings," not former employees'. If I want to buy a boat and a third plane and a fifth residence, guess what, it's my prerogative. I grew up in vastly worse economic conditions than probably every employee did. The last time I saw my abusive and unsupportive Dad was when I was 6. I'm not sorry for myself. It was a blessing. I built everything I've got and I try to ensure employees do better and make more money than they would elsewhere. I'm sure you feel I exploit them. Jeremy certainly did. One big sale is built on the shoulders of years of hundreds of employees' and my past work spanning 13 years. Which I funded at a loss and considerable risk for years. Do I enjoy myself now in life having been in debt for decades and finally making this thing work to the benefit of all our customers and employees? You betcha.

Was there anything illegal about firing Jeremy? No. Immoral? No. He stopped working. Period. And was toxic. And a Dick (Jason's words but mine as well). And it's an at-will work state. And he turned down a generous severance package because he's an idiot. Then nuked as much as he could electronically. And was paid everything he was owed minus what he stole.

Was there anything illegal about letting Kristin go? No. Immoral? No. Am I happy about what happened? Not at all. More than meets the eye? Yep. I was actually fighting to keep the others from firing her. If it was illegal I would be in jail.

That's what eventually happens to people who do illegal things. Like steal. Jail. The ultimate mini home.

I truly wish you well, Robert. Both in life and in your career. I hope your new job is less of a downward slide than the others.

The emperor wears no clothes is not advice as you stated. It's an adage.

Many don't understand where that saying comes from or what it means. I do. I am very aware of myself and what people think of me. I welcome dialogue. I live my life openly and am happy to hear others' concerns, criticism, and comments (typically upper managers, but also Al Dababneh and others willing to dare). If I'm not wearing any clothes in your eyes, it's just because you weren't willing or brave enough to tell me as such. Or because you've let others make up your mind for you. Why don't you (or better yet ask your girlfriend to) differ in opinion with Jeremy about something important to him? See how he reacts. Typically a barrage of unkind and bullying arguments and an unwillingness to even consider the possibility that he is wrong. Or that you may have an opinion which differs with him. That's an emperor who forcibly tells you he has clothes on. But he doesn't.

You're a nice guy, and were a valued and talented employee.

I'll give you another piece of solid advice which made me a lot of money in the few years after I quit my last job and the boss I didn't care for but was respectful to when leaving hired me at his next job. (I know that's a long sentence). Money I poured into a then-money-losing and perilously close to bankruptcy GPS Insight.

Don't burn bridges. Bad idea. Trust me.

This email is between us. I hope you have the individuality to keep it that way.

I hoped for a tie in this one. Mostly for your sake. First and only time they will win.

Thanks again for your good work the past couple years.

Good luck,

Rob

On Aug 4, 2017, at 11:32 AM, Robert Dennis <robert.v.dennis@gmail.com> wrote:

With a heavy heart and after much consternation during my time away from GPS Insight, I have realized that I can no longer continue my tenure of employment with the company. It's a difficult decision as I have grown close to many people in the organization and I truly value the opportunity I was given to help the company grow. I've weighed this with every ounce I'm able to and ultimately, I do not want my career to be measured by my perceived loyalties or my continued friendships with past employees. For this it's for the best for us to part ways. Please consider this my two-weeks' notice.

To provide you with some context on how I came to this decision please consider the following advice that Rob recently gave me: "It's not good enough to just be innocent. You have to look innocent. And sometimes it's better to look innocent than to be innocent." And it's this that I have the most trouble in morally reconciling. There will always be a cloud of doubt over me. I will never fully look innocent at GPS Insight, especially when I do not agree with, and have voiced my opinion on, how things were ultimately handled with regard to Kristin and Jeremy. This is not my attempt to defend them. This is simply my explanation of why I have come to this decision. I cannot morally bring myself to believe that appearances are more important than the truth.

Since Jeremy and Kristin were terminated, there has been tremendous effort among the leadership of the company to justify their illegal termination, despite their previous contributions continuing to pay dividends to the current bottom line. It's difficult to learn about the many new toys acquired from their previous efforts, especially when contrasted against the supposed nickel and dimes of wasted printer paper. It's very difficult to watch history being revised, often through poor attempts at humor, or disparaging remarks, to ease each other's conscience and continue to self-preserve. It's even more difficult to hear the justification that it was a business decision when there are much easier business decisions to make about more obvious sub-standard employees. But since those employees are perceived to be loyal, they'll get a pass. Since those employees don't push for change, they'll get a pass. I simply cannot be a part of that culture any longer.

As I was imparted with some advice about appearances, allow me to provide my own: The emperor has no clothes.

Subject: Re: A Couple Small Requests

Hi Wayne,

As is the customary courtesy, I put in my two weeks' notice on Friday, August 4th. It was my understanding that at that point in time, I was still employed by the company. However, I was asked not to return after sending my letter of resignation. I'm fully aware that GPS Insight is under no obligation to pay me for the two weeks I was willing to work. And it's clear that despite my good faith effort to transition my responsibilities, even in light of my personal disagreements with leadership, the courtesy will not be returned in the form of compensation for that time or for unused vacation. Considering how volatile the situation got and the lack of proper communication to you, it's pretty clear I shouldn't expect the company to "do the right thing," so to speak. Regardless, it was my understanding that my date of separation was August 4th, not July 31st. I will forward you the time-stamped email momentarily that indicates this. Please note that there was an accidental personal charge on the company credit card in March that I had overlooked repaying in the amount of $18.24 for Uber Eats. Please withhold that amount plus whatever necessary interest from any final compensation disbursement. I don't want to be in Rob's debt by any stretch of the measure.

On a personal note, Wayne, I'm very sorry it came to this. I really enjoyed working with you (mostly because I enjoyed beating you in fantasy baseball hahaha) and Justin, and the rest of your team. I wish egos never got in the way of the good thing we all had for a while. Take care.

Robert –

You stated to Wayne that you gave us the customary courtesy of 2 weeks' notice on Friday 8/4 and as such we should "do the right thing" and pay an additional 4 PTO days beyond those we already did in your 7/31 check.

You asked us on very short notice for over a week and a half's vacation beginning 7/27 to "go to Puerto Rico" immediately after our biggest event of the year (the virtual user conference), leaving everyone in your group to do the significant follow-up which was your responsibility.

Then, you gave us notice with the attached resignation letter, received at 11:33 AM on 8/4.

In it, you twisted my words and cited an inaccurate and biased understanding of your friends' justifiable (and perfectly legal) termination (leading to the ongoing prosecution of one of them for felony theft), and attempted to disparage me personally. You criticized our culture as well, which, as you know, has won us the number 2, 3, and 2 spot in the Phoenix Business Journal's Best Places to Work for the past 3 years.

You were quite clearly goading us to decline your offer to continue work for 2 weeks which you were "willing [but unable] to work." Your "good faith effort to transition my responsibilities" was not actually in good faith.
